There is a special kind of disappointment that comes after a renovation. The new floors look beautiful, the kitchen is finally finished, and yet every surface in the house is coated in a fine layer of dust. Wipe a counter and it reappears the next day. For Roanoke homeowners in that position, a dedicated after-renovation cleaning service from The Happy Housekeepers can make the house feel like home again.

Living in the Dust After the Work Is Done

Reviews on the company website mention cleaning after floor refinishing and other contractor work, so the team has real experience with this kind of job. Floor sanding in particular sends extremely fine dust into the air, which then settles on window sills, blinds, baseboards, ceiling fans and light fixtures throughout the house, not just in the room that was worked on. Removing it properly takes methodical work from the top of each room down to the floor.

A post-renovation visit usually combines the standard residential checklist with specialized services. Furniture is dusted and polished, carpets are vacuumed, hard floors are cleaned using products appropriate to the finish, and kitchens and bathrooms receive a full cleanup. Walls and woodwork can be washed, light fixtures cleaned, and the inside of cabinets, ovens and refrigerators addressed if dust has found its way in.

Newly refinished hardwood deserves particular care. If your flooring contractor has recommended a specific cleaner, you can ask the crew to use it, and the company is happy to accommodate that request. Otherwise the team supplies its own products and equipment. Having a professional handle the first proper clean helps protect your investment, rather than risking scratches or residue from the wrong product.

Timing matters too. Many Roanoke homeowners book the cleaning for the day after the contractors finish, before furniture is moved back in. That way crews can reach every corner, and the house is ready for rugs and furniture straight away. If you are living in the home during the work, a series of shorter visits can keep dust under control until the project wraps up.

The Happy Housekeepers is licensed, bonded and insured, and its employees are bonded and insured through the company, so you can leave the team to work while you are elsewhere. The company has been part of the Roanoke Valley since 1979 and has held BBB accreditation since 1993 with an A+ rating. It also works directly with builders and contractors, so your general contractor may already know the team.
