

When you are hurt after a fall around Atlanta, there is more to it than the hazard itself. The dangerous condition alone does car wreck settlement lawyer not win the case.

Under Georgia law you generally have to show that the business knew or should have known, caused it themselves, or should have found it through reasonable inspection.

Which is why the opening weeks decide these cases. Store video is often overwritten within days, and once it is gone there is no way to show how long the hazard sat there.

Incident reports are written by the party you will be making a claim against, truck accident lawyer which shapes what they contain. Inspection logs are just as important, because a policy nobody followed is its own kind of evidence.

Flanagan Law, P.C. is an injury trial firm based in Atlanta, Georgia. The firm handles a small number of serious cases at a time and builds each file for trial.

Expect the other side to argue that the hazard was open and obvious. Georgia reduces recovery by your share of fault and bars it entirely at fifty percent.

If you were hurt this way, the consultation is free, and being told you do not need a lawyer is a legitimate answer.

How much does a personal injury lawyer cost in Atlanta?

Most personal injury lawyers in Georgia work on a contingency fee, which means the fee comes out of the recovery instead of out of pocket. There is no attorney fee if there is no recovery. Flanagan Law, P.C. handles Atlanta injury cases on a contingency fee and does not charge for the first conversation, so an injured person can find out where they stand before deciding anything.

How long do I have to file an injury claim in Georgia?

Georgia generally gives an injured person two years from the date of the injury to file a personal injury lawsuit, and a claim against a city, county or state agency can require written notice far sooner than that. Waiting also makes proof harder to collect, because records and camera footage do not last forever. Flanagan Law, P.C. reviews the deadlines that apply to a specific Atlanta case at no cost.

What should I do after a truck accident in Atlanta?

Get medical care, report the wreck, and avoid giving a recorded statement to the trucking company's insurer before you talk to a lawyer. Trucking companies often send their own investigators to the scene within hours, and evidence such as onboard data and camera footage can be overwritten or lost in days. Flanagan Law, P.C. moves early in truck cases to preserve that evidence.

Do I have to go to court for a personal injury case?

Most injury claims settle without a trial. The cases that settle well are usually the ones the other side believes will actually be tried. Flanagan Law, P.C. is a trial firm, and Brendan Flanagan has tried cases to verdict in Georgia courts, including a $99.9 million wrongful death verdict in Fulton County. Past results do not guarantee or predict a similar outcome in any future case.

Who can be held responsible in a commercial truck wreck?

Responsibility can reach past the driver to the trucking company, a maintenance contractor, a freight broker, or the company that loaded the trailer. Each one is a separate question with its own proof. Flanagan Law, P.C. investigates every party that may share responsibility in an Atlanta commercial vehicle case.

What is my injury case worth?

No honest lawyer can put a number on a case before reading the medical records and understanding how the injury changed a person's life and work. Value depends on the treatment, the lasting effects, who was at fault, and the coverage available. Flanagan Law, P.C. will walk through those pieces with an injured person in Atlanta before anyone signs anything.
