Executive offices carry a different kind of pressure. They are where board meetings happen, where major clients are welcomed and where first impressions about a company are formed. A dusty conference table or a smudged glass partition sends the wrong message. In Roanoke, The Happy Housekeepers offers an executive office cleaning service through its Corporate Clean division, which lists executive offices among its core commercial clients.

Executive suites tend to have finer finishes than general workspaces. Polished wood desks, leather seating, glass tables, artwork and decorative lighting all need care rather than a rushed wipe. Corporate Clean crews dust furniture and horizontal surfaces, vacuum carpets, vacuum and mop hard-surface floors, remove trash, sanitize bathrooms and phones and dust window coverings. Each contract is customized, so particular rooms such as a boardroom or reception lounge can receive extra attention.

Discretion is just as important as quality. Executive offices often contain confidential documents, client files and sensitive equipment. Crews from The Happy Housekeepers are trained by the company, and every employee is bonded and insured through the business. A supervisor is always on call, so if an executive assistant has a concern or a special request before a big meeting, there is someone to contact immediately.
