Most people think of house cleaning as a choice between weekly, bi-weekly or monthly. Those plans cover most households, but not all of them. A busy family with newborn twins, a home business that sees clients every day or a household caring for a relative may need something different. The Happy Housekeepers, a Roanoke company since 1979, notes on its residential page that service can be daily, weekly, semi-weekly, monthly or set to a custom schedule.

Semi-weekly service, meaning twice a week, suits homes with heavy traffic. Large families, homes house cleaning Roanoke with several pets or houses that double as workspaces can get messy fast, and two visits a week keeps them under control. Each visit covers the core list: dusting or polishing furniture, vacuuming carpets, mopping hard floors and complete kitchen and bathroom clean-ups.

Daily service is less common for homes but useful in specific situations. A household recovering from surgery, a family preparing a house for a string of real estate showings or a home hosting a long stay of guests might need a crew more often for a short stretch. Custom schedules let you plan around those circumstances without committing to something permanent.

Custom plans can also go the other way. Some customers want a visit every three weeks, or seasonal visits timed around spring and fall cleanings. Others want a regular plan most of the year and a heavier schedule Go to this website around the holidays. Associates at the office are available by phone or email to help shape a schedule that matches your household.

Specialized services can be built into any custom schedule. Oven and refrigerator interiors, washing walls and woodwork, cleaning light fixtures and cleaning basements can be rotated into visits so the deeper jobs get done without overwhelming any single day.

The Happy Housekeepers is licensed, bonded and insured, and staff are bonded and insured by the company, so you do not need to be home for each visit. The business displays a BBB blue seal and follows up by phone after the first cleaning to make sure you are satisfied.

Estimates are free with no obligation, and Visa, Mastercard, American Express and Discover are accepted.

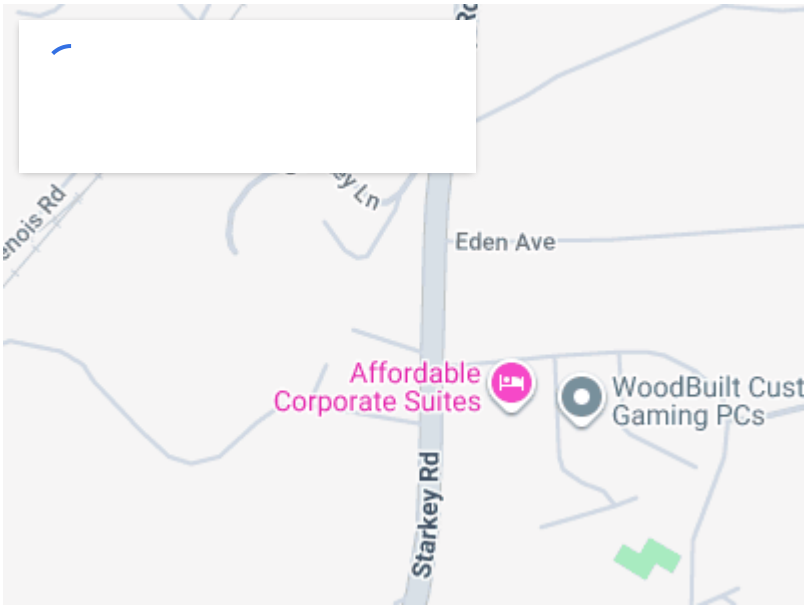

The benefit of a custom schedule is that you only pay for the help you actually need. Rather than forcing your household into a plan that is too frequent or not frequent enough, you can start with what makes sense, then adjust after a few visits once you see how quickly the house gets back to its usual level of mess.
