A remodel or new build is not really finished when the last contractor packs up. Drywall dust lingers on every ledge, sawdust settles in window tracks and cabinet interiors, and footprints trail across brand-new floors. For builders and contractors in the Roanoke Valley, The Happy Housekeepers offers specialized cleaning services that help turn a jobsite into a space that is ready for its owners.

Handing Over a Project That Looks Finished

The company has worked with builders and contractors for years as part of its specialized services, and reviews on its website mention post-renovation cleaning after floor refinishing and contractor work. That kind of cleaning takes patience. Fine dust has to be removed from horizontal surfaces, window sills, baseboards and light fixtures, floors need vacuuming and mopping, and kitchens and bathrooms need a full cleanup before anyone uses them.

For contractors, a reliable cleaning partner is a professional advantage. Handing over a project that looks finished, rather than one that still feels like a jobsite, makes a lasting impression on homeowners and commercial clients. It also frees crews to move on to the next project instead of spending their final day sweeping. With a Roanoke-based team on Starkey Road, scheduling a final clean around your handover date is straightforward.

Homeowners who have just finished their own renovation can book this service too. If you have had floors refinished in a Grandin Village bungalow or a kitchen remodeled in a Salem split-level, a one-time post-renovation clean can get the house livable again quickly. Employees are bonded and insured, so the team can work while you are at the office, and the company supplies all the products and equipment needed.

The Happy Housekeepers has been licensed, bonded and insured since it began in 1979, and it has held BBB accreditation since 1993 with an A+ rating. It also offers commercial cleaning through its Corporate Clean division, so builders working on office fit-outs or medical suites can use the same company for the final clean and for ongoing janitorial service afterward.

Commercial projects follow the same principle. A newly fitted office in downtown Roanoke or a renovated retail space along Electric Road needs to look ready on opening day, with no dust on desks, no grit on floors and restrooms that are fully cleaned. The Happy Housekeepers can schedule the final clean close to your opening date and then continue with ongoing janitorial work through Corporate Clean if you want the space kept that way.

Builders, contractors and homeowners can request a free, no-obligation estimate by calling (540) 774-4299.
