Have you ever replaced a light bulb and wondered why the room still looked dim? There is a good chance the fixture itself was the problem. Glass shades, chandelier crystals and ceiling domes collect dust, grease and the occasional unlucky insect, and all of it blocks light. Cleaning light fixtures is one of the specialized house cleaning tasks offered by The Happy Housekeepers, which has served Roanoke homeowners since 1979.

Most people never think about light fixtures until they notice a shadow in the bottom of a glass dome. By then, months or even years of build-up may be sitting there. Kitchen fixtures pick up a greasy film from cooking, bathroom vanity lights gather residue from steam and hair products and dining room chandeliers hold dust on every arm and crystal.

Cleaning fixtures properly takes care and patience. Shades and globes need to be handled gently, and the crew works carefully around bulbs and wiring. It is exactly the kind of task that gets skipped when homeowners clean on their own, because it involves ladders, fragile glass and awkward angles.

Light fixture cleaning pairs well with other specialized services. During a spring or fall cleaning, many Roanoke customers combine it with washing walls and woodwork, so the whole room looks brighter at once. It is also popular before holiday entertaining, when the dining room chandelier is suddenly the center of attention.

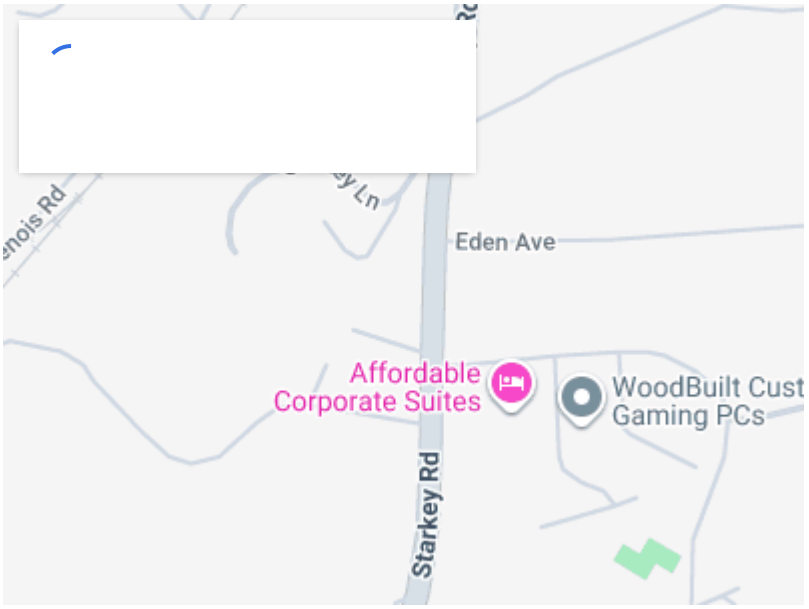

Of course, the standard visit still happens too. Ceiling fans, blinds, window sills and baseboards are dusted, furniture is dusted or polished, carpets vacuumed, hard floors mopped and the kitchen and bathrooms cleaned. Adding fixtures to that list finishes the job from floor to ceiling.

The Happy Housekeepers is licensed, bonded and insured, and staff are bonded and insured by the company so you do not need to be home. The business holds a BBB blue seal, offers free, no-obligation estimates and accepts Visa, Mastercard, American Express and Discover.

There is a practical benefit too. Clean fixtures let you get more light out of the bulbs you already have, which can make rooms feel bigger, safer and more inviting, especially during the short winter days in the Roanoke Valley when the sun sets behind the mountains before many people get home from work. A stairwell or hallway with a clean fixture is simply easier and safer to walk through at night.
